Question No 1

Using the techniques of 'narrative essay' as given in your course-book, write an essay of approximately 500 words on 'A Visit to the Market During COVID-19 Lockdown.'

Answer

A Visit to the Market During COVID-19 Lockdown

A market is the open area or building where people meet to buy and sell goods. Different goods are available for purchase in a market. Numerous markets are available in a particular city. Different kinds of goods are sold in markets. Most of the markets are placed close to residential areas for the convenience of the customers.

I had heard a lot about the oldest and busiest market called 'Anarkali' in Old Lahore. I had never seen it. A few days before my brother's marriage, when my mother was going for shopping, I insisted to accompany her. However, she tried her best to discourage me from coming but I requested hard. She even told me that there would be too much crowd and smart Lockdown due to covid-19 and a child like me may be very tired. However, I still insisted.

We started on our journey with using face mask and sanitizer. After about two hours on the road, we reached the famous Anarkali. I had heard that it was the biggest and oldest market of Lahore. I saw some of men rushing up and down where with fully following of govt SOPs. It appeared as if they were hurrying for an Hospital attendance. The sight of the get up frightened me. I started questioning myself why I chose to come here. As we proceeded towards the shops, I was impressed. Lot of Shops but few items were kept for sale and all the shops were too limited with red circles for purchasing anything.

Walking through the people's with taking in mind social distance, first we went to suiting and shirting shops after entering in shop shopkeeper sanitizing our hands where we had to make bulk purchases for my brother and gifting to friends and relatives. Each shop was limited crowd with customers. I was confused to see huge stocks of suiting and shirting piled up in each of these shops but also worried about limiting people and limited employees in shops and Mall. In every shop, salespersons were busy with the customers and after few mints tell about precautions about horrible wave of covid-19. While shopping in one of the shops we got some relief from the pushing on the crowded lanes.

I was once again a bit worried and now we were looking for a good jewellery shop. I was surprised to see so many jewellery shops. I had never imagined that expensive gold items could be available in so many shops. In these lanes, we spent nearly two hours glancing into one shop to another and making selections of different gold ornaments. Seeing the fast movement of the customers in and out of the shops, my mother said that these days the sale was more than usual because of the expensive rate of jewelry due to covid-19 so people save advancelly for marriage season . Moreover, the festival season was also round the corner but due to covid delay day by day.

After having bought several bags of clothes, jewellery and other important things, we finally stepped out from the shop. Such a visit was my first experience. I was impressed to see the shops full of items and different markets for different things but also worried about people's behavior relating to SOPs and social distance . Although it was a tiring day, our shopping was wonderful. This was my most interesting visit to a market.

Computer Languages

A computer language used for creating web documents can be classified according to its purpose: HTML, JavaScript, and CCS. The first type of computer language, HTML, is the basic language for creating an HTML, or web document. HTML, or Hypertext Markup Language was developed in the 1980's and revised until it reached its current form. The style and content of a webpage is determined by HTML code, tags, and attributes. A text file ending with the.html extension is written in a text editor such as Notepad, and then interpreted by a browser. For example, the MSUGF homepage contains images, text, links, headers and other HTML elements specified by HTML code which causes it to display in a web browser such as Internet Explorer. The second type of computer language, CSS, or Cascading Style Sheets is also a language used for creating web pages; however, its purpose is to describe a pages structure and style. An inline, embedded, or external style-sheet is used in accompaniment to HTML and indicates styles for features like fonts, colors, images and text. CSS is also used to position elements on a web page, and to format how the page is displayed on various output devices, including printed documents, monitors and handheld devices. The third language, JavaScript, is a computer language used for creating executable applications in web documents. Like HTML and CSS, JavaScript is created with a text editor and displayed by a browser. An application is composed of objects like expressions, variables, values and operators. An automatically updated time or date on a web page is a JavaScript application. A script can be produced for various functions including hiding e-mail addresses from spammers, or performing mathematical functions. HTML, JavaScript, and CSS computer languages used for indicating the style, content, and formatting of elements within web pages are constantly being revised to improve usability for the programmer and the end-user and to offer endless options for web design.

Best ever novel for me

Moth Smoke

By Mohsin Hamid

Moth Smoke is a short but interesting novel that focuses on the imprisonment of Daru and the events that lead to the downfall of his life. The book appears at first to skip around, and can become somewhat confusing as you're taken through the twists and turns of the upper and middle class of Pakistan. As you traverse the novel you meet different characters who all play an important part in Daru's life, and have a large affect on his fate.

While the book starts, centered in the courtroom where he is accused of murdering a child, it quickly shifts to the story as it needs to be told by the main character and eventually his former best friend, his once lover (who is also his best friend's wife) and brief appearances from servants to pugnacious rickshaw drivers.

Though we learn a great deal about Daru's life, from being fired from his job and living without electricity in the middle of the hot Pakistani summer what is more important is the relationships he has and the different perspectives that all of the characters have on how his life and the story unfolds. I found this enchanting and very well pulled off, it gives the reader a glimpse into other minds and a chance to see through other eyes throughout the book.

This isn't a novel that alienates those who are unfamiliar with the culture of Pakistan, it does a very good job of illustrating the different nuances and differences of life and the author makes several acerbic but accurate observations on his culture. If anything, Moth Smoke is about the plight of the common man in a country struggling at once for footing in the modern world and global economy and the people who are trapped between classes hard to bridge for both old and new reasons.

I deeply enjoyed this book and the style of writing employed by Mohsin Hamid, he at once conveys the frustrations, elation, and tribulations of his characters. Meanwhile he manages to weave together the snapshot of a man's life with the fate of an entire nation, and for that this work should be applauded.

Summary

First day of college my first class was of philosophy, after entering in class teacher give assignment of philosophy which difficult for me as a new student. In college my ambitious was to become a good mathematician, but after getting a philosophy assignment I was worried because no giddiness give professor about assignment, so mean while professor say "I want to see what you come up with."

I was fully anxiety because I write assignment multiple times and read to check in and out point to check authentic answer but I can't satisfied with my work, but in opposite side when in mathematics class I give examples and arguments for better explanations. when I sat down to write, the words just did not come to me. My notes and ideas were all present, but the words were lost. I decided to try every prewriting strategy I could find. After trying multiple times I set outline to write assignment, so during writing I feel why I can't write something because I'm not self confidence to do this, so after trying I able to write final conclusions, start proofreading which make me fully satisfied with my work.

After some weeks, professor declared results and returned assignment one by one I feel afraid when I hold my paper in hands then check A grade mark on paper and professor comment that I wrote an effective essay overall. He wrote that my reading of the essay was very original and that my thoughts were well organized. My relief and newfound confidence upon reading his comments could not be overstated.

I learned a lot of things from this assignment because now I feel best in philosophy class. I never expected to enjoy a philosophy class and always expected to be a math and science person. Later on, this class and assignment, however, gave me the self-confidence, critical-thinking skills, and courage to try a new career path. So in college I came to become engineering but after this solving assignment my mind changed, and I went to study philosophy to become a lawyer. Instead of seeing college as a direct stepping stone to a career, I learned to see college as a place to first learn and then seek a career or enhance an existing career. By giving me the space to express my own interpretation and to argue for my own values, my philosophy class taught me the importance of education for education's sake. In the end, that awareness continues to pay daily benefits.
